National Vision, Inc. Announces Planned Retirement of Bruce Steffey, President and Chief Operating Officer

Jeff McAllister, With 30 Years of Retail Operations and Supply Chain Experience, to Succeed Mr. Steffey Upon Retirement

Duluth, Ga. (July 6, 2017) - National Vision, Inc., one of the nation's largest optical retailers providing quality, affordable eye care and eyewear, today announced the planned retirement of Bruce Steffey, President and Chief Operating Officer, effective September 1, 2017. Upon Bruce's retirement, Jeff McAllister, a Senior Vice President at Walmart and 19-year Walmart veteran, will succeed Mr. Steffey as Chief Operating Officer.

Bruce Steffey has had an impressive career with more than 30 years of specialty retail experience in both jewelry and optical. His jewelry career began with Service Merchandise, where he spent 19 years, followed by Zales Corporation where he spent 7 years. He has served as National Vision's Chief Operating Officer since October 2002 and President since 2012. Throughout his 15 years with National Vision, Steffey has led an Operations team that has delivered some of the most consistently strong results in American retail.

"For all of us at National Vision, working with Bruce has been a complete and utter joy. Bruce is one of those rare leaders who demands and gets the best results out of people while concurrently both supporting and inspiring them," said Reade Fahs, Chief Executive Officer of National Vision, Inc. "Bruce has been a great partner to me, the Board and our entire team. Bruce's presence will be deeply missed by all of us at National Vision."

Mr. Steffey commented, "Serving on National Vision's leadership team for the last 15 years has been the highlight of my career. It has been an honor and privilege to work with the many incredibly talented Associates in stores across the country, and I am proud of all we have accomplished together. I am confident in the high-caliber leadership that Reade and Jeff will continue to provide. I believe the Company is well positioned for a successful future and look forward to watching their progress continue."

"I am excited to join the National Vision team, and I look forward to helping the company continue to advance its mission of helping people by making quality eye care and eyewear more affordable and accessible," said Jeff McAllister. "Reade, Bruce and the entire team have built an Associate and Optometrist-centered, mission-driven organization that exists to make eye care and eyewear more affordable to its patients and customers. I am excited to be able to contribute to the Company's continued success."

Fahs continued, "Jeff is a tremendous leader. He and I enjoyed working together several years ago when he led Walmart's Vision Center business." Fahs added, "While National Vision will benefit from Jeff's strategic leadership, operational experience and track record of success in optical retail – ultimately, like all our hiring decisions – the choice of Jeff came down to culture. We believe that Jeff lives the approach of servant leadership – especially with store-based Associates and Optometrists – that is the hallmark of who we are at National Vision."

Jeff McAllister, a Navy Veteran, joined Walmart in 1998 as Vice President of Logistics Engineering and Planning, and he has since served in a variety of supply chain and operations capacities including Vice President of Walmart's Global Supply Chain, Chief Operating Officer for Walmart Japan, and Senior Vice President for Optical. In addition, he led operations for Walmart's Health and Wellness Group and for Walmart's Texas Division. Jeff's current role is Senior Vice President, Next Generation Supply Chain for Walmart U.S. Prior to joining Walmart, Jeff managed logistics for Saks Fifth Avenue and May Department Stores.
